

EPISCOPAL

SCHOOL OF BATON ROUGE

This position is for a Physics and Physical Sciences teacher. An additional role of mentoring students in a scientific research course is a possibility depending on candidate's fit/strengths. The teaching candidate must embrace helping student to develop inquiry skills through a hands-on approach and providing experiences with the practices of science. Knowledge of the Next Generation Science Standards or at least an interest to learn about them and to use them in their teaching is preferred. A teacher interested in working cross-curricularly with other disciplines to employ project-based learning would be an excellent fit as well. Our new science and math facility, opened this school year, is a flexible and thoughtfully designed building that will serve research projects and project-based learning well.

The position is full-time. A bachelor's degree is required, and post-graduate work in a scientific field is helpful. At least three years of teaching experience with depth of science understanding is preferred. The candidate must be a self-motivated individual with good communication skills who works well with others and has an eagerness to help each student achieve his or her full potential. An unwavering professional demeanor is expected, and the skill to develop strong relationships is a must. Being a person that self-identifies (and that others describe) as a "happy" person, an emotionally intelligent person, a person with natural "situational awareness," a person who feels comfortable in a school striving toward "Good to Great" management principles, a "forward-looking" person, and a person who "plays well with others," are all characteristics of the successful candidate. The Episcopal faculty member serves as a representative of the school at all times, upholding its mission both personally and professionally.
